Contents

Acknowledgments ix
Tables and Figures x
Conventions xi

Introduction: The Han tree of knowledge 1
Section 1: Connecting Han idea systems / 6
Section 2: Metaphors they lived by / 18
Section 3: Modifying our approach to the ancestral cults / 34

Part I: An imaginary yardstick for ritual performance 46
Section 4: Ritual texts as performance scripts / 48
Section 5: The experience of performance / 52
Section 6: The framing techniques of performance / 55
Section 7: The microcosm created by performance / 67
Section 8: Do we trust these ritual prescriptions? / 74

Part II: A history of remembering and forgetting imperial ancestors 102
Section 9: The Second Emperor of Qin’s ritually correct shrine (209 BCE) / 104
Section 10: The ancestral perpetuity of Emperor Wen (157 BCE) / 108
Section 11: Emperor Wu’s wine-tribute scandal (112 BCE) / 114
Section 12: Emperor Xuan’s sacrifice to his “ancestors” (65 BCE) / 123
Section 13: Kuang Heng’s support for a closed system of worship (48-43 BCE) / 130
Contents

Section 14: Liu Xin’s opposition to a closed system of worship (6-1 BCE) / 135
Section 15: The ancestral shrine of Wang Mang (20 CE) / 141
Section 16: The Guangwu Restoration and shrine reconfiguration (43 CE) / 147
Section 17: The imperial mourning shed of Chancellor Jing (143 CE) / 156
Section 18: Empress Liang’s attempt to rearrange the ancestral order (145 CE) / 165
Section 19: The court’s debate on remembering Empress Dou (172 CE) / 169
Section 20: Cai Yong’s reform in the waning Han (190 CE) / 174
Section 21: The Wei Dynasty’s resurrection of the Zhou ideal (237 CE) / 178

Part III: A spectrum of interpretations on afterlife existence 184

Section 22: The do ut des relationship / 187
Section 23: The sincere sacrificer / 195
Section 24: The mental bridge between sacrificer and sacrifice recipient / 201
Section 25: The thought-full sacrifice recipient / 207
Section 26: The complete denial of ancestral existence / 219

Part IV: The context of early Chinese performative thinking 229

Section 27: The Han theory of performative thinking / 234
Section 28: The Han application of performative thinking / 251

Part V: The symbolic language of fading memories 280

Section 29: The symbol cluster of darkness on the edge / 284
Section 30: The symbol cluster of light in the center / 301
Section 31: Acknowledging the gray in-between / 332

Conclusion 346

Reference Matter

Notes 351
Works Cited 439
Index 465