Contents

Figures, Maps, and Tables  xiii
Conventions  xv

Introduction  1
International Relations and the Entrenched Ideology of Seclusion  6
Japan and Early Modern Proto-Globalization  12
The Domestic Parameters of the System of Foreign Relations  19

1 Interdependent Partners: The Shogunate, Satsuma, and Tsushima  25
Foreign Relations in the Sixteenth and Early Seventeenth Centuries  30
Satsuma and Tsushima in the New Tokugawa Foreign Relations Order  34

2 The Reaction against Globalization  49
Restricting Silver  52
The Domains and Tokugawa Currency Manipulations  59
Localization  68
Conclusions  71

3 Guarded Engagement  73
1764 as a Trade Watershed  74
The Local Impact  89
Russian Probes  97
The Reforms of Matsudaira Sadanobu  102
Matsudaira and Foreign Trade  107
The Presentation of Guarded Engagement  110
Conclusions  114
Contents

4 Domestic Demand and Foreign Trade 116
   New Domestic Market Dynamics 121
   The Emergence of the Satsuma Entrepôt 125
   Reasserting Tokugawa Authority at Nagasaki 133
   Tsushima: “We Are a Small Island Domain with Little Agricultural Production” 139
   Maintaining the Outward Face of Guarded Engagement 145
   Conclusions 147

5 Local Japan Encounters the West 150
   Western Visits to Ryukyu and the Satsuma Response 152
   Divisions within Satsuma 159
   Nariakira in Control 162
   Tsushima and Western Visitors 168
   Conclusions 176

6 The Transition in Foreign Trade 178
   Tokugawa Trade Initiatives 180
   Satsuma’s Domestic and Foreign Trade Ventures 186
   Godai Tomoatsu and Commercial Opportunism in Europe 200
   Conclusions 204

7 Defending the Domain and the Realm 207
   Ōshima Tomonojō and the Campaign for Bakufu Aid 218
   Bitter Factional Rivalry 227
   Ōshima and Tokugawa Initiatives 231
   Conclusions 233

   Conclusion: The End of Domain Agency and the Adoption of International Relations 235

Reference Matter

Works Cited 253

Index 271