Maps, Figures, and Tables

Maps

0.1 Wannian, Sanliaowan, and Bade 19
1.1 The village of Wannian 29
1.2 Wannian and neighboring areas 30
3.1 Location of Sanliaowan 80
3.2 Sanliaowan after the Wangyes’ geomantic reformations 86
5.1 The four temples with which Jingming shrine tried to establish connections 155

Figures

1.1 The deities in Wannian 31
1.2 A camp of spirit soldiers 42
1.3 Deep hollow at the base of Dadaogong’s statue 46
2.1 A new medium lying flat on the ground with his “sense organs exhausted” 57
2.2 The rite of “opening the mouth” 58
2.3 The senior medium teaching the neophyte
to “open the five spirit-soldier camps” 59
2.4 The routes for fire-crossing 63
3.1 The new temple 92
4.1 The core members of the shrine 108
Maps, Figures, and Tables

4.2 Jingming shrine
4.3 The spirit medium commanding the five spirit-soldier camps
4.4 Spirit medium, interpreter, and male assistants
4.5 Picking vegetables together
4.6 Facebook dialogue about an upcoming pilgrimage
4.7 Facebook dialogue about the transmission of the drumming tradition
4.8 Comments on Facebook about exorcism rituals
4.9 Children watching the spirit medium in a trance
4.10 Computer-edited photo of eight families dining together
5.1 Photographs on the shrine wall showing the miracle of a divination block balanced on its ends
5.2 A stool substituting for a patient during an exorcism ritual
5.3 The spirit medium’s diary showing people who came for consultation
5.4 The spirit medium rapidly commanding many talismans
5.5 The spirit medium using divination blocks to consult deities
5.6 Divine messages from four important temples

Tables

1.1 The material forms and relationships to people and places of the three types of spirits (gods, ancestors, and ghosts)
1.2 Five spirit-soldier camps and their characteristics