Contents

Tables xii

Abbreviations xiii

Introduction 1

Leaving the Center / 1
Qu in Mid-Ming and North China / 6
Major Writers and Their Communities / 9

1 Paths into Qu Writing 17
   Early Days in the Capital / 17
   Dismissal in 1510 / 23
   Qu as an Alternative yet Appropriate Genre / 31

2 Performing Contentment and Dramatizing Retirement 39
   Returning to My Fields / 39
   The Tradition of Withdrawal Songs / 47
   Rejecting Rejection / 55
Contents

3 Writing in a Local Community
- Tracing a Qu Community / 69
- Beyond the Anthologies / 73
- Song Matching / 75
- Sharing a Subject / 88

4 A World of Their Own: Textual and Social Space
- Songs for Occasions / 113
- A Collection of Birthday Songs / 115
- Birthday Songs: Popularity, Styles, and Subjects / 131
- Creating Our World and Our Community / 142

Interlude

5 The Encounter Between the Masters of Two Generations and Two Locales
- An Episode of Later Significance / 149
- The Turning Point in 1541 / 161

Part II: Li Kaixian in Shandong

6 A Local Club and a Wider Community of Sanqu
- A Qu Writing Club in Li Kaixian’s Home Village / 169
- Beyond the Local: From a Hundred Songs to Near a Hundred Colophons / 179
- Providing a Template / 186

7 Drama Activities and Qu Printing Projects
- A Southern Play by a Northern Writer: Baojian ji / 200
- Yuanben and the Tradition of One-Act Plays / 211
- Printing Projects / 218

8 The Master of Song and Drama
- The Role and Influence of Li Kaixian / 227
- The Making of a Master: Li’s Self-Fashioning / 230
- Defense, Self-Justification, and Apologies / 235
- The World of Qu Writing in Shandong After Li Kaixian / 240

Conclusion / 245
Appendix
   Editions of Qu Writings Discussed  253

Reference Matter
   Works Cited  265
   Index  283