Contents

List of Tables and Figures  xi

Acknowledgments  xiii

Introduction  1

Part I: Caucasians and Race in Imperial Japan

1  Racism, Race Consciousness, and Imperial Japan  21
   A Normative Racism  23
   Aspects of Race Consciousness in Imperial Japan  28
   Sources of Cognitive Dissonance  34

2  Privilege and Prejudice: Being a Westerner in Imperial Japan  44
   Early Foreign Settlements  46
   The Yokohama Community  51
   Ornaments in Isolation: The Frank and Balk Families  59
   Class Insularity at Western Resorts  76

3  Handling the Other Within: Approaches to Preemptive Containment (1939–41)  83
   Direct and Indirect Forms of Containment  85
   Japan’s “Jewish Problem” and the Kobe Community  98
   A Repressed, Mobilized Christianity  109
PART II: LIVES IN LIMBO: WARTIME CONTAINMENT IN THE WAKE OF PEARL HARBOR

4 First Responses and Containment Protocols after Pearl Harbor (1941–43) 123
   A New Taxonomy of Foreigners 124
   Temporary Detentions of Suspicious Enemy Nationals 130
   Enemy Diplomatic Staff under House Arrest 139
   Racialized Others: Jews and Asians 144

5 Watched and Unseen: Nonenemy Nationals after Pearl Harbor (1941–43) 152
   Fracture and Emotional Conflict 154
   Withdrawal and Invisibility 168
   Japanese Ambivalence and Antiforeign Sentiment 173

6 Fleeing for the Hills: Evacuee Communities in Hakone and Karuizawa (1943–45) 182
   “Running Smoothly” in Gora 187
   Karuizawa: A “Strange Miniature Babel” 193

PART III: LIVES BEHIND WALLS: JAPAN’S TREATMENT OF ENEMY CIVILIANS

7 From Humiliation to Hunger: The Internment of Enemy Nationals (1941–45) 219
   Camp Administration 219
   The Initial Roundup (1941–42) 227
   Stringency and Privation (1942–45) 239

8 Torture and Testimony: The Incarceration of Suspected Spies (1944–45) 253
   Interrogation 255
   Trial and Imprisonment 269
   Death and Liberation 275

9 Race War? On Japanese Pragmatism and Racial Ambivalence 286
   The Failure of Propaganda 287
   Continuity and Change Following the Surrender 304
Contents

Epilogue 310

Notes 313

Bibliography 341

Index 355